

Disclaimer

The information provided on this website has been compiled by the Institute of Medical Informatics, University of Münster, with the utmost care. Nonetheless, the University cannot assume liability for the topicality, accuracy, completeness or quality of the information in question. The University of Münster, the authors of these Web pages and the persons responsible for this website cannot be held liable for material or non-material damage caused by incorrect or incomplete information, provided that the deficiencies in question are not deliberate or due to gross negligence.

This website is supported by a grant from José Carreras Leukämie-Stiftung. Nonetheless, José Carreras Leukämie-Stiftung is not responsible for the contents of this website and therefore cannot assume any liability.

The above also applies to information provided on websites to which the Internet user is referred by means of a hyperlink. Although the contents of these websites are entirely beyond the sphere of responsibility of the University of Münster, the sites did not contain any illegal material when the link was set up. Since it is impossible to exert any kind of influence on the form or content of the linked websites, the University of Münster, the authors of these Web pages and the persons responsible for this website cannot accept liability for damage caused by incorrect or incomplete information provided on the websites to which the Internet user is referred by means of a link. All legal disputes which may arise in connection with this website are subject to German law.

Terms of Use of the Institute of Medical Informatics Services

1. The public database of the institute is freely available by any individual and for any purpose.
2. Software which can be run at the institute may be used by any individual for any purpose unless specific exceptions are stated. The only exceptions with respect to software will be the prohibition of downloading, redistributing or re-engineering the software, and these exceptions only apply if explicitly stated.
3. Users of the institute's services agree not to attempt to use any part of the institute's computers, files or networks apart from through the service interfaces provided.
4. The institute does not guarantee the accuracy of any data or databases nor the suitability of databases, software and services for any purpose.
5. For planning and scientific review purposes, the institute will keep records of usage. The institute may make information about the total volume of usage of particular software or databases to third parties organisations who supply the software or databases.

6. Logs of usage may also be maintained for the purposes of monitoring and improving services, and measuring the impact a particular service has on our resources. These logs will be kept in confidence and not made available for other purposes or to third parties.
7. The institute regards the nature of the work carried out by any individual user as confidential, and shall make every reasonable attempt to prevent breaches of that confidentiality.
8. The institute does not accept responsibility for the consequences of any breach of the confidentiality of the institute's site by third parties who by any means gain illegitimate access to information from the institute.
9. The institute itself places no restrictions on the use or redistribution of the data available via its services. However, some of the original data may be subject to patent, copyright, or other intellectual property rights claimed by third parties. It is the responsibility of users of the institute's services to ensure that their exploitation of the data does not infringe the rights of such third parties. The institute can neither comment on the validity of their claims nor grant unrestricted permission regarding the use of the data.
10. The institute will make all reasonable efforts to maintain continuity of service and provide adequate warning of any changes or discontinuities. However, the institute accepts no responsibility for the consequences of any temporary or permanent discontinuity in service.
11. The institute requires attribution for any of its services or data that it is subsequently used in another product or service.
12. Any feedback on services and software provided by the institute will be treated as non-confidential unless the individual or organisation providing the feedback states otherwise.
13. The institute is not liable to you or third parties claiming through you, for any loss or damage.
14. These Terms of Use reflect the enduring principles under which the institute's services are offered. We will not, without good reason, alter them, and where alterations are inevitable, we will attempt to give reasonable notice of such alterations. However, we do reserve the right to alter these terms at any time in order to ensure their appropriateness to the institute's mission.

Institute of Medical Informatics
Albert-Scheitzer-Campus 1
-Gebäude A11-
D-48149 Münster, Germany

Telephone: +49 (251) 83-55262

E-mail: : imi@uni-muenster.de